Approach:

- Global/local
- Participatory

Thematic axes of transformation:

- Reconnecting with nature
- Regaining a sense of belonging
- Prioritising the places and people that need it the most
- Shaping a circular industrial ecosystem and supporting life-cycle thinking

1. Call for projects open from February to December 2022

From public libraries and community-led initiatives, to schools and universities.

The Commission will connect and promote the projects, so they become inspiration for others.

2. Dedicated New European Bauhaus prizes in 2023

The prizes will reward and allow the best projects to shine.

Why this call?

- Co-design conclusions: education is the basis for transformation
Children to learn the value of living in more sustainable and fair societies
- A new approach to education
Value-based, learning by doing and by connecting different realities
- Need for upskilling and preparing for a new reality
e.g. architects and construction workers are not always used to work with the digital tools that could help to avoid material loss or include natural materials
- Potential of less formal ways of learning in bridging silos
Bringing new groups of people together and creating empathy, speeding up knowledge sharing and mutual understanding of complex topics

Senior Citizens! Come Back to School!

Author: Elżbieta Ryczek.

Our locality is home to many senior citizens. How could we involve them in school activities and use their educational potential? We are a small village school, which is the centre of events for our neighbourhood. This is where cultural life thrives and integrates the people of local villages. We live far away from major cultural centres like Poznań or Zielona Góra, so we have to organize everything ourselves.

City of Echoes

New European Bauhaus Prizes 2021 - TOP 60

A living lab where every story counts.

“University training, provides us with the essential tools and skills and entitles us to make decisions that shape our built environment. The issue however, arises when one relies solely on this type of education and stops listening and asking questions. At city of Echoes, we are experimenting with a complementary educational strategy which is based on learning directly from the citizens. We ask questions, listen to stories and imagine our tomorrow.”

Xifré's Rooftop

New European Bauhaus Prizes 2021 - winner

A dual purpose renovation project, in terms of both architecture and ecology.

“Covering an early 19th-century block of ten buildings in the center of Barcelona, this contemporary roof garden creates a “floating” wild space that enhances urban biodiversity and opportunities for social interaction between neighbours. The rooftop elements of the historic building have been carefully restored. MataAlta Studio’s design prioritises circularity in the way it recycles resources such as water, energy and carbon. The vision for the rooftop is a highly accessible community space that promotes social interaction, discovery through play and people’s physical and mental wellbeing. They run workshops and family activities over the seasons, providing educational opportunities for residents to learn from nature. The Xifré rooftop is different from the common concept of green roof design because of its focus on boosting urban biodiversity, strengthening social networks and respecting heritage.”

Open-air museum of the Resistance

New European Bauhaus Prizes 2021 - TOP60

Digital access to the history hidden in a city.

“The digital museum enriches the places with information and value for an educational project aiming at involving the whole community. The developed project organizes the historical locations of the Italian liberation where partisans fought for freedom, in the city of Milan providing a map of the hot spots and gravestones that can be visited and they can deliver their storytelling to citizens and tourists.”

School of Architecture (Arhitektuurikool)

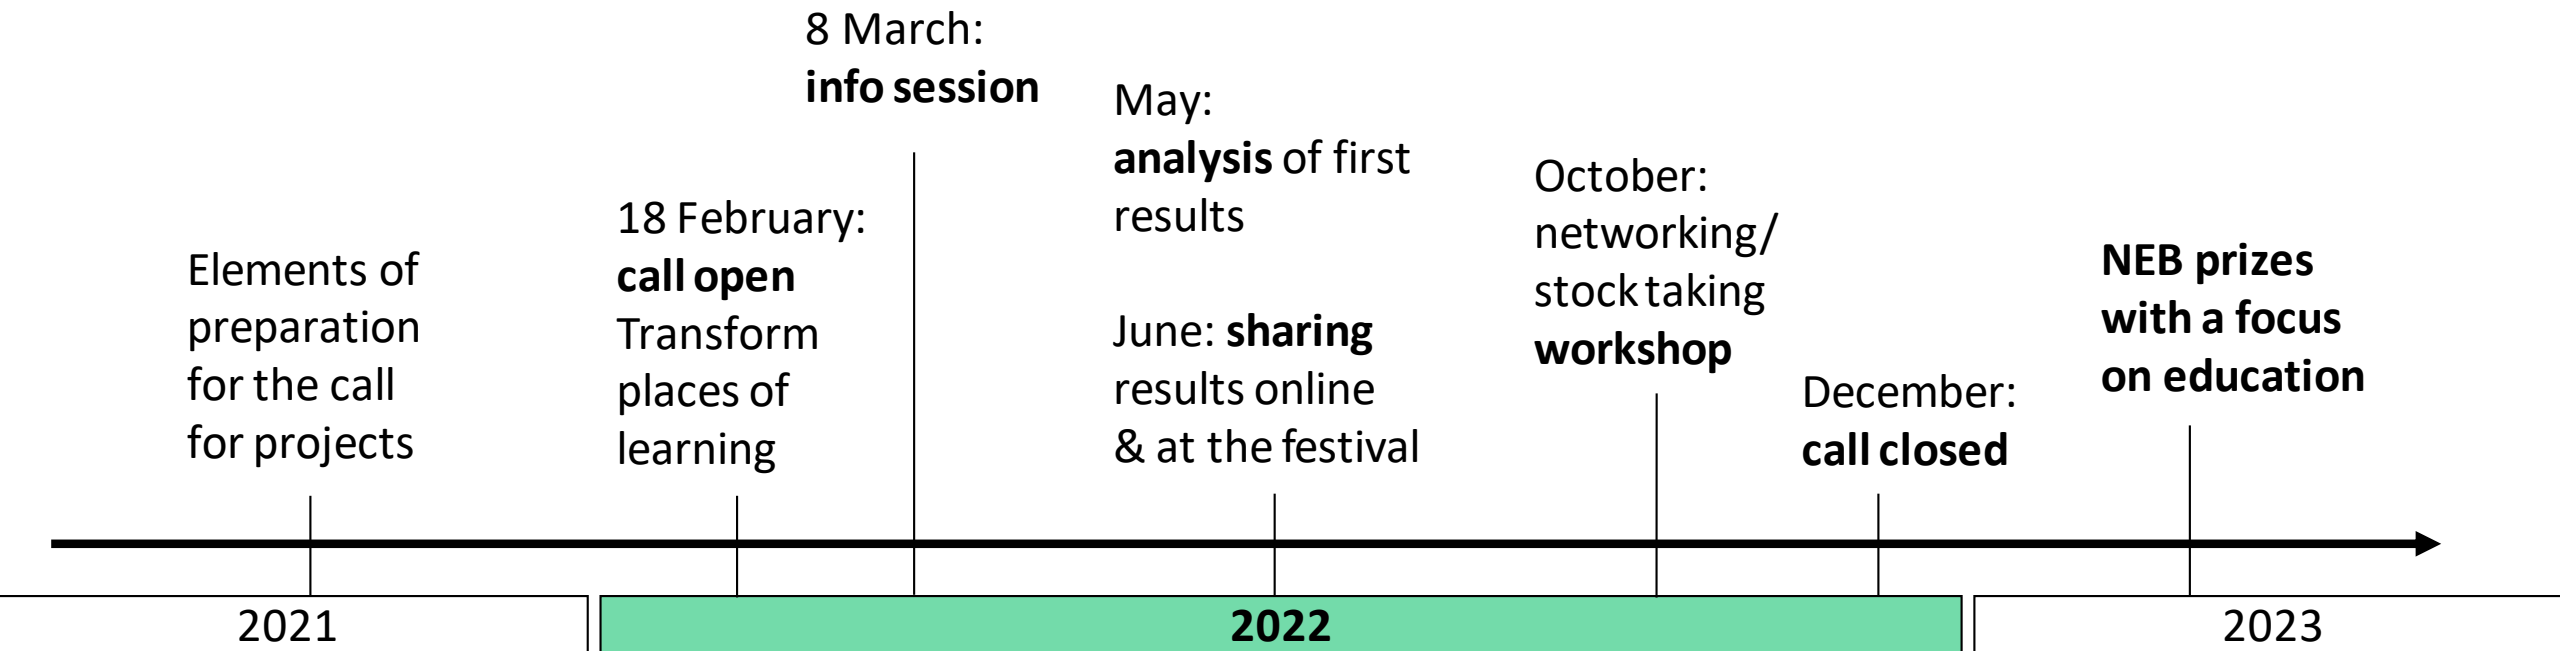

OMC group

A hobby school where kids between the ages of 7 and 19 explore and create the spaces around them.

“There is no other initiative like this in Estonia and only a handful of this kind in Northern Europe and the Baltics. Arhitektuurikool students develop environmental literacy through noticing, understanding and seeing alternatives to the way places are built and what they mean to the public. In addition to weekly lessons, Arhitektuurikool also organises inspiring architecture-related events across Estonia, publishes study materials to promote creative thought and provides education about the built environment. In addition, the team behind Arhitektuurikool has developed a unique elective course that is taught in high schools, also training teachers and preparing teaching materials for them. Parents have also started to participate in the programme.”
